UP CLOSE AND PERSONAL WITH SACAJAWEA

~ HANNAH C. ~ MORNINGSIDE

Hi, I am Hannah C., reporting live in 1805 from Montana with three special guests: Meriwether Lewis, William Clark, and Sacajawea:

HANNAH: "What is the point of this expedition?"

LEWIS: "President Jefferson wants us to go across the NW Passage and explore the new Louisiana Purchase."

SACAJAWEA: "I came with them to translate the Shoshone language for these white explorers."

HANNAH: Where is your final destination?

CLARK: "We are going through North Dakota and Montana in hope of finding a water passage all the way from the Atlantic to the Pacific."

HANNAH: Best of luck to you. I hear you are traveling with a baby and a dog, too. We will keep our readers updated on your progress. Maybe it will be good news and we will get some travel destinations out of it!

THE BATTLE OF THE LITTLE BIGHORN

~MILENA T. ~ MORNINGSIDE

The Battle of Little

Bighorn is crazy... gun fire from all directions! This is Milena Tronson and I am here at the Battle of Little Bighorn! Colonel George Armstrong brought over 600 men to fight a battle over a possession from the government they never got. This just in-

People are dropping like crazy, some even committing suicide. It has now been a day, and the battle is already over. There were 287 deaths counted so far.

PEARL HARBOR BOMBED!

BY BRECKIN F. - MORNINGSIDE

December 7, 1941. I was standing on the beautiful beaches of Oahu Island, Hawaii, enjoying the warm weather and the gorgeous view of the harbor. It was around 08:00 in the morning. Then, I saw a jet flying over to the island. It was not a very large jet, maybe 20 feet long. When it got closer, I saw that it had the Japanese flag on the side of it. I wondered what that thing was doing there. Next, I saw more jets following the first one. There must have been at least ten! Five minutes later, there were hundreds of jets in the air. They all came closer, and then they all started dropping bombs and shooting the ships in the harbor. I started running for my life! It was crazy loud. I could feel the impact of bombs shaking the ground and water around me. However, I did not look back, but I kept on running. That was the last I have seen of Pearl Harbor since. The beautiful beaches now have a sad remembrance of the horrible attack. This is important because it got us into WWII.

THE BOMBING OF PEARL HARBOR

BY CHARLIE K. - MORNINGSIDE

On December 7, 1941, the Japanese bombed our naval base at Pearl Harbor, located on Oahu, Hawaii. They did this to keep the U.S. from joining the war because the United States was (and is) a strong military force, and if the U.S. had joined, we would have been fighting against Japan and its allies. Today a Memorial stands at Pearl Harbor for people to visit and pay their respects.

EXTRA! EXTRA! READ ALL ABOUT IT!

BY KAEDEN D. - MORNINGSIDE

It was a big day in Montana, near the Little Bighorn River. A battle raged on and I saw it all happen from the beginning to end. It was the 25th of June and the year was 1876. I was rowing on the Little Bighorn River when this happened.

Tribes of Native Americans were killing White people from Eurasia, it looked like it was because the miners were taking the main food source, Buffalo, and also stealing gold from the Black Hills.

The reason why is because this man named Custer had found the gold. I decided to stick around because this was interesting. Lakota, Arikara, Northern Cheyenne, and Arapaho tribes defended Sioux and Cheyenne families. Their leaders were Crazy Horse and Sitting Bull.

All of a sudden, a battle raged on! I have seen the Battle of Rosebud before, so I knew that this battle had something to do with it. Now I knew that I had to watch the rest. It was a long battle, but in the end, the Native Americans won while Custer and his men died. I say this is what makes the battle significant.

Since it took place near the Little Bighorn River, I will call it the "Battle of Little Bighorn!" I also came with the name of "Custer's Last Stand," but the Native Americans call it the "Battle of Greasy Grass."
